Creator Information: National Commission on the International Year of the Child

In December 1976, the United Nations General Assembly adopted a resolution declaring the year 1979 as the International Year of the Child. There were two general objectives outlined in the resolution. First, the resolution sought "to provide a framework for advocacy on behalf of children and for enhancing the awareness of the special needs of children." Second, it attempted to "promote recognition of the fact that programs for children should be an integral part of economic and social development plans." The resolution sought to produce lasting benefits to children by encouraging member nations to act independently on a national level, as well as cooperatively on an international level. The National Commission on the International Year of the Child was created on April 14, 1978 by issuance of Executive Order 12053. The Commission was created as a national organizing body for the observance of the United Nations celebration of 1979 as the International Year of the Child. The Commission's purpose was to initiate, publicize, coordinate and review government and private programs relating to the needs of children. The Commission panel included private citizens and Federal Government members. Mrs. Jean C. Young, wife of United Nations Ambassador, Andrew Young, chaired it. The final report was issued in April 1980.
