Scope and Content:

This collection consist of speeches, speech drafts, edited and final copies, press releases, press conference transcripts, briefing material, fact sheets, news clippings, correspondence, resumes, job applications, notes, reports, background material, and publications. The background material was used in preparing the speeches. Also included are internal staff communications, statements, and annotations within the speech drafts by the President, Vice-President, and other administration officials.

The collection also includes speeches and speech drafts for Rosalyn Carter and other members of the White House Staff. Reference material on various topics related to the 1980 campaign, and information on Ronald Reagan's statements are also included. General topics of speeches include civil service reform, education, energy, hospital cost containment, and inflation. Prominent speeches, such as the State of the Union Addresses, are accompanied by input from various departments, advisors, and Cabinet members.

Creator Information: Speechwriter's Office

The Speechwriter's Office prepared various drafts of Presidential speeches and reviewed material that was issued under the President's signature. The office was responsible for the phrasing of the document and not the content. The speechwriters produced a speech draft that was readable, understandable, and presented a proper tone. President Carter would comment and revise the drafts as he saw fit. The speechwriters also drafted speeches for various staff personnel. The chief speechwriter supervised the daily operations of the entire speech-writing staff.

The speechwriters originally worked for Press Secretary Jody Powell. In 1978, the speechwriting function shifted to the Office of Gerald Rafshoon. When Rafshoon left the White House in September 1979, the speechwriting functions were transferred to Al McDonald's Office who was Assistant to the President and Staff Director. Jim Fallows served as Chief Speechwriter for President Carter until November 1978. Hendrik Hertzberg became Chief Speechwriter in May 1979. There were ten other speechwriters that worked for the Carter Administration.

Biographical information on key office personnel is located at the end of the finding aid.
