SUBJECT: North-South Strategy (U)

The President has directed that the Policy Review Committee undertake an analysis of, and provide options concerning, U.S. policy on relations between developed and developing nations. The economic aspects of this analysis are to be staffed through the Economic Policy Group prior to their consideration by the National Security Council.
The agencies listed in parenthesis should take leadership responsibility for the following subjects:

- Institutional arrangements, including forums in which North-South issues can be discussed, with proposed strategies for UNCTAD and CIEC (State)
- Commodities, including commodity agreements, the Common Fund, and price indexation (Treasury and State)

Each study should analyze the contribution of the various policy options to U. S. domestic and global economic interests, humanitarian interests, international political relationships, and security interests. It should include an assessment of the impact of each option on the interests and objectives of other industrialized democracies. Each study should also suggest specific initiatives which the U. S., or the industrialized countries together, might take, and each should assess relevant Congressional considerations, including the nature, timing, and strategy of legislative action. These studies should be completed by February 28 for early submission to the President through the National Security Council.
