Survivor of Liberian Civil War Coming to Carter Museum

Agnes Kamara-Umunna Discusses And Still Peace Did Not Come

Atlanta, GA.- Agnes Kamara-Umunna takes you into the violence of the Liberian Civil War at a special conversation and book signing in the Carter Presidential Museum at 7:00 pm on Thursday, March 24th. Following the conversation, Agnes will be signing copies of her new book And Still Peace Did Not Come.

When bullets hit her home in Monrovia, Liberia, she and her father hastily piled whatever they could carry into their car and drove toward the border, along with thousands of others. An army of children was approaching, under the leadership of Charles Taylor. It seemed like the end of the world. Slowly, they made their way to the safety of Sierra Leone. They were the lucky ones.

After years of exile, with the fighting seemingly over, Agnes returned to Liberia--a country now devastated by years of civil war. Families have been torn apart, villages destroyed, and it seems as though no one has been spared. Reeling, and unsure of what to do in this place so different from the home of her memories, Agnes accepted a job at the local UN-run radio station. Their mission is peace and their method is reconciliation through understanding and communication. Soon, she came up with a daring plan: Find the former child soldiers, and record their stories. And so Agnes, then a 43-year-old single mother of four, headed out to the ghettos of Monrovia and befriended them, drinking Club Beer and smoking Dunhill cigarettes with them, earning their trust. One by one, they spoke on her program, Straight from the Heart, and slowly, it seemed like reconciliation and forgiveness might be possible. This is their story.

From Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, Africa's first female president, to Butt Naked, a warlord whose horrific story is as unforgettable as his nickname--everyone has a story to tell. Victims and perpetrators. Boys and girls, mothers and fathers. Agnes comforts rape survivors, elicits testimonials from warlords, and is targeted with death threats--all live on the air. Set in a place where monkeys, not raccoons, are the scourge of homeowners; the trees have roots like elephant legs; and peacebuilding is happening from the ground-up. Harrowing, bleak, hopeful, humorous, and deeply moving--And Still Peace Did Not Come is not only Agnes's memoir: It is also her testimony to a nation's descent into the horrors of civil war, and its subsequent rise out of the ashes.

Join the Carter Center's Tom Crick as he talks with Agnes Kamara-Umunna about Liberia's past, and its future. The reading and book signing is free and open to the public. Doors to the Carter Presidential Museum Theater open at 6:30. The program begins at 7:00pm. Copies of And Still Peace Did Not Come will be available for purchase and signing at the event.
