Behind the Scenes During World War II at the Carter Museum

Historian Jonathan Jordan Tells the Story of Eisenhower, Patton & Bradley

Atlanta, GA.- Hear the inside story about the leaders of the Allied Forces during World War II when author Jonathan Jordan comes to the Carter Presidential Library on Wednesday, April 6th at 7:00 pm. Jordan will discuss and sign his new book Brothers, Rivals, Victors: Eisenhower, Patton, Bradley and the Partnership that Drove the Allied Conquest in Europe.

Literary Journal says "While legend holds that they got along well, in reality theirs was a troubled partnership; Eisenhower and Bradley were disgusted with Patton's hunger for publicity, and Eisenhower was challenged to work with the British and French. Independent historian Jordan, with research based on diaries and personal accounts, puts us in the mindset of the protagonists and their staffs to understand what was boiling under the surface.".....

"This is very much an emotional military history, compelling and easy to read, yet also well documented. Recommended to both specialists and general readers."

Meticulously researched and vividly written, Jordan recounts the battle for Europe through the eyes of these three legendary generals who fought to liberate two continents. For the first time in such detail, the bonds between these battle captains are explored, and readers are treated to a rare insider's view of life at the summit of raw, violent power. Throughout three years of hard, bloody warfare, Eisenhower, the Alliance's great diplomat, sought victory in the fighting qualities and tactical genius of his most trusted subordinates, Bradley and Patton. Bradley and Patton, in turn, owed their careers to Eisenhower, who protected them from the slings and arrows of politicians, rival generals, their allies, and the U.S. Navy.

The reading and book signing are free and open to the public. No reservations are needed. Acappella Books will be selling copies of Brothers, Rivals, Victors at the reading.
