Georgia on My Screen

Jimmy Carter and the Rise of the Film Industry

Atlanta - The Jimmy Carter Presidential Library and Museum presents an exciting new exhibition, Georgia on My Screen: Jimmy Carter and the Rise of the Film Industry. Beginning with then-Governor Jimmy Carter's creation of the first state film office, the exhibition traces the development and impact of a multibillion-dollar industry in the state. The exhibition will open May 3rd and be on display through the end of the year.

Created with the generous support of the Georgia Film, Music & Digital Entertainment Office, major production studios, local film offices and museums, the exhibition includes artifacts from over 60 productions, filmed over the last 46 years in Georgia, including critically-acclaimed films, blockbuster movies, and major television series.

A few highlights of the exhibition include:

- The Best Picture Oscar® for Driving Miss Daisy
- More than twenty objects from AMC's hit TV show The Walking Dead, including Negan's bat, "Lucille" and Daryl's motorcycles
- A white oak stake from the Warner Bros. vampire series The Originals-- the only weapon on Earth that can kill an Original vampire
- Iconic costumes and artifacts from Netflix's *Stranger Things, including Eleven's dress and Chief Hopper's uniform
- Vinny's boots and Mona Lisa's dress from the 20th Century Fox film, My Cousin Vinny (1992)

- Denzel Washington’s coaching uniform from Walt Disney Picture’s film, Remember the Titans (2000)
