TALKING POINTS

1. AMBASSADOR [Peter] HERMES, AMBASSADOR [<sup>Yoshiro</sup>Yoshio] OKAWARA, MAJORITY LEADER BYRD, GOVERNOR ROCKEFELLER, MEMBERS OF CONGRESS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN. I AM PROUD TO WELCOME YOU ON AN OCCASION OF GREAT SIGNIFICANCE TO OUR NATION AND TO OUR ALLIES. THE AGREEMENT WE SIGN TODAY JOINS THE SPIRIT OF OUR INTERNATIONAL SUMMIT MEETINGS AND THE WILL OF OUR INDIVIDUAL NATIONS IN POSITIVE, CONCERTED ACTION.

2. THE SR II COAL LIQUEFACTION PROJECT, SPONSORED BY THE PRIVATE AND PUBLIC SECTORS OF JAPAN, GERMANY, AND THE UNITED STATES, WILL NOT ONLY SPEED OUR PROGRESS TOWARD ENERGY SECURITY, IT WILL STRENGTHEN THE CAUSE OF COOPERATION AMONG THE OIL IMPORTING COUNTRIES OF THE WORLD.

3. AT THE SUMMIT MEETINGS IN TOKYO AND VENICE, OUR NATIONS PLEDGED TO REDUCE OUR DEPENDENCE ON IMPORTED OIL -- BOTH BY CONSERVING MORE OIL NOW, AND BY DEVELOPING EVERY POSSIBLE ALTERNATIVE ENERGY SOURCE FOR THE FUTURE. THANKS TO THE TOUGH ENERGY CONSERVATION MEASURES WE HAVE TAKEN, AMERICA'S NET OIL IMPORTS ARE DOWN ALMOST 15 PERCENT FOR THE FIRST 200 DAYS OF 1980 OVER THE SAME PERIOD LAST YEAR.

4. NOW WE ARE MOVING VIGOROUSLY TOWARD INCREASED ENERGY PRODUCTION -- THROUGH GREATER USE OF COAL, OF SYNTHETIC FUELS, OF SOLAR POWER, GASOHOL, GEOTHERMAL AND OTHER SOURCES. EARLIER THIS MONTH, I SIGNED THE ENERGY SECURITY ACT, AND WE ARE ALREADY

MOVING TO IMPLEMENT IT. PROJECTS LIKE THE GREAT PLAINS COAL LIQUEFACTION PLANT ND THAT WE ANNOUNCED TWO WEEKS AGO, AND THE AGREEMENT THAT WE ARE SIGNING TODAY, ARE ONLY BEGINNINGS OF WHAT WILL BECOME THE LARGEST PEACETIME COMMITMENT BY ANY NATION IN HISTORY -- LARGER THAN OUR MANHATTAN PROJECT, OUR INTERSTATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM AND SPACE PROGRAM COMBINED. IT INVOLVES OUR NATION'S INDUSTRY, LABOR AND GOVERNMENT -- AND THOSE OF OUR ALLIES -- IN WORKING TOGETHER TOWARD ENERGY SECURITY FOR ALL.

5. THIS PROJECT WILL AID IN THAT OVERALL EFFORT:

- IT WILL PRODUCE THE EQUIVALENT OF 7 MILLION BARRELS OF OIL A YEAR. THAT IS 7 MILLION FEWER BARRELS THAT WE AND OUR ALLIES WILL HAVE TO IMPORT.
- IT WILL CREATE JOBS -- 3,500 CONSTRUCTION JOBS IN WEST VIRGINIA. FIVE HUNDRED MORE MEN AND WOMEN WILL BE EMPLOYED TO OPERATE THE PLANT.
- THIS PLANT WILL USE MORE THAN 2 MILLION TONS OF COAL EACH YEAR -- AMERICA'S MOST ABUNDANT ENERGY RESOURCE -- AND WILL DO IT IN AN ENVIRONMENTALLY ACCEPTABLE WAY. THIS ALSO MEANS MORE JOBS FOR THE COAL MINING INDUSTRY.

6. THIS IS A SPECIAL DAY FOR SENATOR BYRD AS WELL, WHO HAS BEEN WORKING TO MEET THE WORLD'S ENERGY NEEDS THROUGH GREATER USE OF COAL FOR OVER 20 YEARS. EVENTS HAVE LONG AGO PROVEN HIM RIGHT. I AM GLAD OUR RECENT ACHIEVEMENTS WILL MAKE IT POSSIBLE.

7. ENACTING A NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM -- INCLUDING THE ENERGY SECURITY ACT -- REQUIRED COOPERATION FROM ALL THOSE CONCERNED ABOUT OUR NATION'S SECURITY. THE PROJECT THAT WE ANNOUNCE TODAY IS A SYMBOL, AND AN EXAMPLE, OF THAT KIND OF COOPERATION RAISED TO THE HIGHEST INTERNATIONAL LEVEL.

8. I WANT TO EXPRESS SPECIAL THANKS TO THE GOVERNMENTS, BUSINESSES, AND CITIZENS OF GERMANY AND JAPAN. THIS EVENT REPRESENTS FAR MORE THAN A COMMITMENT TO MAKE MORE FUEL -- IT DEMONSTRATES OUR DETERMINATION AS FRIENDS AND ALLIES TO FACE THE FUTURE TOGETHER. AND AS THIS PROJECT SHOWS, THERE IS NO DOUBT THAT ~~TRILATERAL~~ TEAMWORK SUCH AS OURS CAN MEET ANY CHALLENGE IN THE WORLD WITH TOTAL CONFIDENCE IN OUR SKILL, RESOURCES, AND COURAGE.

INTRODUCTION OF SENATOR BYRD

- o Senator Byrd has been at the forefront of the effort to put a national energy policy into place. He recognized early the role that coal must play in that policy.
- o He has made substantial contributions over the last 20 years to the welfare of the nation's coal industry.
- o For example, Senator Byrd was the original sponsor of the Coal Research Act of 1960, which established the Office of Coal Research under the Department of the Interior. In fact, he helped obtain the first $1 million to fund coal research.
- o I share his satisfaction at how far we as a nation have progressed since that time in utilizing our coal resources, and look forward to working with him on the important initiatives that lie ahead.

SUBJECT:

Agenda for the Inflation Breakfast, Thursday,
July 31

Since this is our first breakfast in a long time, I think that it would be useful for us to have a general discussion about a number of major areas of economic policy in which you may want to make major pronouncements in the next couple of months.

These areas, I suggest, are:

- o "Industrial policy"
- o Wage and price policies, including TIPS
- o Tax and budgetary policies

Bill Miller's office is going to supply you with some background papers. You already have the OMB budget review paper on industrial policy.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: GENE EIDENBERG
JIM MCINTYRE

SUBJECT: Love Canal

Electrostatic Copy Made
for Preservation Purposes

Unfortunately, Love Canal is still an issue. Since we last reported to you, several events have occurred, or are about to occur, which add to the volatility of this situation:

- o Senator Javits introduced, and the Senate overwhelmingly approved, an amendment to the FEMA supplemental which essentially allows and encourages you to do whatever you deem necessary to take care of the Love Canal residents. The amendment was introduced because we have steadfastly maintained that we "cannot and will not buy homes." Love Canal residents believe that it directs you to purchase their homes.
- o Governor Carey submitted a proposal for a $20 million federal loan to the State to be repaid upon positive settlement of the Federal government's lawsuit against the Hooker Chemical Company.
- o The Justice Department has ordered EPA to turn over data on all previously conducted studies to the area's Congressman, John LaFalce. While all of the studies have been available previously to the public, most have never been made public. The comprehensive list, which will probably be delivered within the week, contains studies with results that range from being fairly innocuous to being potentially alarming.
- o The state plans to release a study at the end of this week which indicates dioxin levels at the rate of 223 parts per billion in the Love Canal sewer system. According to Barbara Blum, this constitutes a higher concentration than Agent Orange.

Past home?

Governor Carey has persisted relentlessly in his public request to us to purchase residents' homes. His doggedness has kept alive the residents' expectations that we will give in.

With the Javits amendment and the ongoing volatility caused by the Governor's continual fueling of expectations, we feel it is necessary to respond to the amendment, the Governor and the New York delegation, by offering the following:

- . A $10 to $20 million loan to the State to be repaid according to definitive, negotiated terms, not related to the lawsuit against Hooker; or
- . Up-front, "in lieu" payments equivalent to the amount the Federal government would pay for temporary assistance over a 12 month period. These payments could be given directly to families for the purpose of moving out of the area, or provided in a lump sum to the state. The Javits amendment gives us the authority to do either without setting a precedent which might be applicable to possible future hazardous waste emergencies.

We believe that somewhere between these two options, we might be able to reach a final settlement with the state, and we recommend you authorize us to instruct FEMA to enter into such negotiations. Because of the approaching convention, we would like your permission to do so as soon as possible.

If negotiations fail, FEMA would unilaterally make these offers "public" and Carey will have the burden of responding to our generosity.

SUBJECT: NATIONAL HISPANIC HERITAGE WEEK PROCLAMATION
SIGNING - JULY 31ST, 7:00 P.M. - BRIEFING PAPER

TORRES
11/11/80

Background

In September 1968, the Congress passed Joint Resolution 1299, which has since become Public Law 90-498 asking that the President designate the week including September 15 and 16 as National Hispanic Heritage Week. This year September 14 through 21 will be observed as National Hispanic Heritage Week by virtue of your signature of the Presidential Proclamation.

Participants

Approximately one thousand Hispanic-Americans from across the United States have been invited to attend as well as your Cabinet and senior Hispanic Presidential appointees.

Hispanic Heritage Week Signing Ceremony

Congressmen Roybal and Garcia, Damas y Caballeros:

Bienvenidos a la casa blanca. Es un gran placer ver a tantas de mis amistades aqui en esta importante celebracion.

[Welcome to the White House. It is a great pleasure to see so many of my friends at this important celebration.]

It is a pleasure for Rosalynn and me to have you here
today.

We have some 12 million people around the country with Hispanic backgrounds. We even have three Georgians here in the White House -- Rosalynn, Amy and me -- trying to learn to speak Spanish without your cultural advantages.

This nation was founded on a common belief in freedom, justice and opportunity. Its unity has always come from our shared commitment to those principles rather than simply common geography, history or language. We are made up of people from all areas of the world, come together for human betterment -- our own, that of our families and that of all humanity. This aspect of our national experience and of our national character is as vital as ever today -- and nowhere can that vitality be seen more clearly than in the Hispanic American community.

Newly-arrived Hispanics join descendants of Hispanic families who were here generations before the Pilgrims arrived at Plymouth or the first shots were fired at Lexington and Concord. The Hispanic community, like the larger American community, is diverse in origin and interests, needs and assets.

I know the special problems Hispanic Americans face, but I also know the special strengths you bring to those problems. I am fully conscious of the important contributions made by outstanding Hispanic Americans in science, the arts, sports and politics, as Nobel-prize winning scientists, but I am also aware of the vital but often unrecognized contributions of average Hispanic citizens, quietly doing their daily duty. It is these citizens, who embody the deepest values of your heritage, that we celebrate most of all today.

As President I am called upon to make hundreds of decisions each week. But one decision I made before I came to this office. I was determined to do everything I could as President to see that no American should have to bear the burden of discrimination -- whether because of race, religion, sex or ethnic background. I was determined to do all I could to see that no man or woman was deprived of a job or the opportunity to open or expand a business or enter a profession because of prejudice.

Most of all, I was determined to do everything I could to see that every child, every young person in this great country had the chance to get the education and training to develop his or her talents and potential to the fullest, so that whether that child became a doctor or a business owner, a carpenter or a scientist, an artist or an auto mechanic would depend not on what job that child's parents had or how much money or education they had, but on the abilities and interests and on the hard work of the child.

That is why in three years we have increased Head Start by more than 70 per cent, why we have increased education funds by 73 per cent, why we have increased bilingual and Indian education funds by 117 per cent. I am proud that we now have a Department of Education and a Secretary of Education who has taken a seat at the Cabinet table. Part of their role is to ensure access for all youngsters to education.

Next week, Secretary of Education Shirley Hufstedler will take an important step toward that end. She will send to the Federal Register proposed regulations that will guide our future efforts to see to it that no child is denied educational opportunity because he or she is not proficient in English.

One of the great strengths of this country is the pluralism of our cultural heritage. We have built on the diverse backgrounds of people with roots in many lands, and one of the significant elements in that cultural diversity is language. As you know, this Administration is firmly committed to the goal of bilingual education. I restated that commitment in a recent meeting with Hispanic leaders, and I reaffirm it to you now.

Secretary Hufstedler tells me that she wants your help in writing a final regulation. The Education Department will seek the fullest comments on this proposed regulation in hearings in six cities throughout the nation, through open dialogue with community leaders, parents, educators and students.

Education -- public education -- is a door to opportunity that must be open to every youngster.

When I took office, I was determined to make government the source not of pork-barrel projects, but of serious self-help. That is why we have doubled federal funds for direct urban economic development to build communities that could provide jobs, why we doubled the Job Corps, why we increased public service employment by 171 per cent. That is why we doubled the set-asides on government contracts for minority-owned businesses, and why we fought in the courts for those set-asides over and over again, to see them finally upheld by the United States Supreme Court just four weeks ago.

That is why on September 18 we will have a meeting with farm workers and farm worker organizations to extend the scope of our Small Community and Rural Development Policy to meet the needs of migrant and seasonal workers, and why I have asked my assistants Esteban Torres and Gene Eidenberg to convene a Farmworker Policy Review Committee composed of federal officials from various agencies and departments to follow up on the recommendations of that Consultation with Farmworkers.

That is why I told every department of government to look at its recruitment, hiring and promotion policies. As a result, Hispanic employment at HEW -- before it split into Education and Health and Human Services -- increased by 37 per cent, and at Labor by 100 per cent.

I have not done all I intend to do, but with your help we have laid the groundwork for the kind of future we all want to build. We have not settled for quick solutions to paper over problems while they festered and got worse. We had enough of that kind of government in the eight years before I took office.

I have brought in leaders from the Hispanic community to help me not only with problems of special concern to Hispanics, but in all areas of government. I have appointed more Hispanics to top-level government positions than any other President in our history, and more to the federal bench than all Presidents before me combined. Those judges will be interpreting the laws that guarantee your rights and those of your children and grandchildren into the next century, and I am not through yet.

One of the most complex and difficult challenges facing our nation has been in immigration. Right now, war, oppression and economic need are pushing millions of people out of their homelands at a time when our own economy is severely strained. At such a time, how do we maintain our cherished tradition as a haven of freedom and opportunity? I have been fortunate to find two sensitive and dedicated administrators who were willing to take on the enormous pressures and frustrations of trying to bring the Immigration and Naturalization Service into the 20th century -- first Leonel Castillo and now Matt Garcia, whose name I have proudly sent to the Senate for confirmation.

There could be no stronger testimony to the power of the American dream than the stream of refugees and immigrants fleeing political oppression and economic need, risking their lives to find freedom and opportunity in America.

Just as Hispanic Americans have always answered the call of our nation in time of war, I am counting on you now to answer the the call of our nation to continue the fight for human rights, for social and economic justice and for peace at this time of danger and challenge.

It is with great pride that I sign this proclamation declaring the week of September 14 as Hispanic Heritage Week.

[Sign proclamation.]

I spoke earlier of the talented Hispanics I had been able to bring into government. Richard J. Rios (Ree-hos), the new director of the Community Services Administration, is typical of these capable and concerned public servants. He follows another outstanding administrator in that post, Graciela Olivarez.

Before assuming his new duties, he was director of the California State Office of Economic Opportunity, and his background ranges from working with juvenile offenders to employment development, to multi-cultural and educational programs at the college level.

Richard, I want you to understand something from the beginning. I have not appointed you to manage federal anti-poverty programs -- I have appointed you to lead people out of poverty. Your job is to make programs work for people, to help them help themselves.

For that reason, I am pleased to witness your formal oath of office here on the White House lawn before this distinguished gathering of Hispanic Americans, and to call upon everyone here today to help you in this fight to bring economic opportunity to all Americans.

CORRADA

DE LA GARZA - KENT HANCE

Congressmen Roybal and Garcia, Damas y Caballeros:

Bienvenidos a la casa blanca. Es un gran placer ver a tantas de mis amistades aquí en esta importante celebracion.

Electrostatic Copy Made

[Welcome to the White House. It is a great pleasure to see so many of my friends at this important celebration.]

It is a pleasure for Rosalynn and me to have you here
today.

We have some 12 million people around the country with Hispanic backgrounds. We even have three Georgians here in the White House -- Rosalynn, Amy and me -- trying to learn to speak Spanish without your cultural advantages.

This nation was founded on a common belief in freedom,
justice and opportunity. Its unity has always come from our shared commitment to those principles rather than simply common

geography, history or language. We are made up of people from all areas of the world, come together for human betterment -- our own, that of our families and that of all humanity. This aspect of our national experience and of our national character is as vital as ever today -- and nowhere can that vitality be seen more clearly than in the Hispanic American community.

Newly-arrived Hispanics join descendants of Hispanic families who were here generations before the Pilgrims arrived at Plymouth or the first shots were fired at Lexington and Concord. The Hispanic community, like the larger American community, is diverse in origin and interests, needs and assets.

I know the special problems Hispanic Americans face, but I also know the special strengths you bring to those problems. I am fully conscious of the important contributions made by outstanding Hispanic Americans in science, the arts, sports and politics, as Nobel-prize winning scientists, but I am also aware of the vital but often unrecognized contributions of average Hispanic citizens, quietly doing their daily duty.

It is these citizens, who embody the deepest values of your heritage, that we celebrate most of all today.

As President I am called upon to make hundreds of decisions each week. But one decision I made before I came to this office. I was determined to do everything I could as President to see that no American should have to bear the burden of discrimination -- whether because of race, religion, sex or ethnic background. I was determined to do all I could to see that no man or woman was deprived of a job or the opportunity to open or expand a business or enter a profession because of prejudice.

Most of all, I was determined to do everything I could to see that every child, every young person in this great country had the chance to get the education and training to develop his or her talents and potential to the fullest, so that whether that child became a doctor or a business owner, a carpenter or a scientist, an artist or an auto mechanic would depend not on what job that child's parents had or how much money or education they had, but on the abilities and interests and on the hard work of the child.

That is why in three years we have increased Head Start by more than 70 per cent, why we have increased education funds by 73 per cent, why we have increased bilingual and Indian education funds by 117 per cent. I am proud that we now have a Department of Education and a Secretary of Education who has taken a seat at the Cabinet table. Part of their role is to ensure access for all youngsters to education.

Next week, Secretary of Education Shirley Hufstedler will take an important step toward that end. She will send to the Federal Register proposed regulations that will guide our future efforts to see to it that no child is denied educational opportunity because he or she is not proficient in English.

One of the great strengths of this country is the pluralism of our cultural heritage. We have built on the diverse backgrounds of people with roots in many lands, and one of the significant elements in that cultural diversity is language. As you know, ~~this Administration is firmly committed to the goal of bilingual~~ education. I restated that commitment in a recent meeting with Hispanic leaders, and I reaffirm it to you now.

Secretary Hufstedler tells me that she wants your help in writing a final regulation. The Education Department will seek the fullest comments on this proposed regulation in hearings in six cities throughout the nation, through open dialogue with community leaders, parents, educators and students.

Education -- public education -- is a door to opportunity that must be open to every youngster.

When I took office, I was determined to make government the source not of pork-barrel projects, but of serious self-help. That is why we have doubled federal funds for direct urban economic development to build communities that could provide jobs, why we doubled the Job Corps, why we increased public service employment by 171 per cent. That is why we doubled ~~the set-asides on government contracts for minority-owned~~ businesses, and why we fought in the courts for those set-asides over and over again, to see them finally upheld by the United States Supreme Court just four weeks ago.

That is why on September 18 we will have a meeting with farm workers and farm worker organizations to extend the scope of our Small Community and Rural Development Policy to meet the needs of migrant and seasonal workers, and why I have asked my assistants Esteban Torres and Gene Eidenberg to convene a Farmworker Policy Review Committee composed of federal officials from various agencies and departments to follow up on the

recommendations of that Consultation with Farmworkers.

That is why I told every department of government to look at its recruitment, hiring and promotion policies. As a result, Hispanic employment at HEW -- before it split into Education and Health and Human Services -- increased by 37 per cent, and at Labor by 100 per cent.

I have not done all I intend to do, but with your help we have laid the groundwork for the kind of future we all want to build. We have not settled for quick solutions to paper over problems while they festered and got worse. We had enough of that kind of government in the eight years before I took office.

I have brought in leaders from the Hispanic community to help me not only with problems of special concern to Hispanics, but in all areas of government. I have appointed more Hispanics to top-level government positions than any other President in our history, and more to the federal bench than all Presidents before me combined. Those judges will be interpreting the laws that guarantee your rights and those of your children and grandchildren into the next century, and I am not through yet.

One of the most complex and difficult challenges facing our nation has been in immigration. Right now, war, oppression and economic need are pushing millions of people out of their homelands at a time when our own economy is severely strained. At such a time, how do we maintain our cherished tradition as a haven of freedom and opportunity? I have been fortunate to find two sensitive and dedicated administrators who were willing to take on the enormous pressures and frustrations of trying to bring the Immigration and Naturalization Service into the 20th century -- first Leonel Castillo and now Matt Garcia, whose name I have proudly sent to the Senate for confirmation.

There could be no stronger testimony to the power of the American dream than the stream of refugees and immigrants

fleeing political oppression and economic need, risking their lives to find freedom and opportunity in America.

Just as Hispanic Americans have always answered the call of our nation in time of war, I am counting on you now to answer the the call of our nation to continue the fight for human rights, for social and economic justice and for peace at this time of danger and challenge.

It is with great pride that I sign this proclamation declaring the week of September 14 as Hispanic Heritage Week.

[Sign proclamation.]

I spoke earlier of the talented Hispanics I had been able to bring into government. Richard J. Rios (Ree-hos), the new director of the Community Services Administration, is typical of these capable and concerned public servants. He follows another outstanding administrator in that post, Graciela Olivarez.

Sec of Navy HIDALGO
Victor MARRERO. U.S. Sec HULD

Before assuming his new duties, he was director of the California State Office of Economic Opportunity, and his background ranges from working with juvenile offenders to employment development, to multi-cultural and educational programs at the college level.

Richard, I want you to understand something from the beginning. I have not appointed you to manage federal anti-poverty programs -- I have appointed you to lead people out of poverty. Your job is to make programs work for people, to help them help themselves.

For that reason, I am pleased to witness your formal oath of office here on the White House lawn before this distinguished gathering of Hispanic Americans, and to call upon everyone here today to help you in this fight to bring economic opportunity to all Americans.

FROM: JACK WATSON Jack

SUBJECT: Your Remarks Tonight at the Hispanic Event

Victor Marrero, Under Secretary of HUD, called to my attention today the fact that, when he participated in the Cabinet Meeting last Monday, representing HUD in Moon Landrieu's absence, he was the first Hispanic to sit as a member of the Cabinet. You might, in your remarks tonight, note that you felt a historic moment occurred this week when you looked around the Cabinet table and saw Victor Marrero, a Hispanic, sitting in the Cabinet.

STATE PRESIDENTS OF FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA
Thursday, July 31, 1980
10:45 a.m.
The Rose Garden
From: Anne Wexler AW

I. PURPOSE

To greet the 1980 State FFA Officers, to present an award to the chapter which won your Energy Challenge Competition, and to receive a plaque of appreciation from the National FFA President.

II. BACKGROUND, PARTICIPANTS AND PRESS PLAN

A. Background: This meeting is the highlight of the 13th annual Future Farmers of America State Presidents Conference. The FFA currently represents over 500,000 young people in 50 states including Puerto Rico. Last year in your speech to the FFA leaders you challenged them to "...get involved in the basic question of energy conservation and production..." You also promised to recognize the one chapter which did the most outstanding job in meeting that challenge. FFA accepted the challenge and organized a nationwide competition. Over 2,000 local chapters entered the competition. A national committee organized by FFA and chaired by Congressman Morris Udall selected the 4 regional finalists from which this year's winner was recommended. None of the four regional winners or any of the FFA members will know the identity of the winner until you announce it. Additionally, you will announce a surprise award to the National FFA in recognition of the excellent job they did in organizing and conducting the competition.

B. Participants: Approximately 250 people will be attending. This includes the Presidents and the Presidents-elect of the 50 state organizations, and Puerto Rico; 100 local chapter officers; and 50 guests and advisors. Grouped around the podium when you arrive will be:

- Dee James, Central Region Vice President
- Donald Trimmer, Eastern Region Vice President
- Jeffrie Kirby, Southern Region Vice President
- Elin Duckworth, Western Region Vice President
- Philip Benson, 1980 FFA Secretary

Douglas Rinker, 1980 FFA President
Byron Rawls, National FFA Advisor
Robert Lund, Chairman, National FFA Foundation
V.P. General Motors
R. M. Hendrickson, Chairman-elect of the National FAA Foundation
President, Pfizer Agric. Div.

In the first few rows of the audience will be the two officers and the advisor from each of the 4 regional winning chapters. When you announce the winning chapter, the officers and advisor from Alamosa FFA will come forward.

- C. Press Plan: There will be open press coverage for your remarks.

III. AGENDA

1. The President arrives, greets those grouped around the podium, and delivers his remarks.
2. The President announces the winning FFA Chapter, from Alamosa, Colorado.
3. The Alamosa Chapter officers proceed to the podium, (Shannon Selvidge, President; Shawn Woods, President-elect, Kirk Gobel, advisor).
4. The President presents the award to President Shannon Selvidge. The winning chapter returns to their seats.
5. The President announces a special surprise award to the National FFA for its outstanding efforts in organizing and conducting the National Competition in which 2,000 chapters participated.
6. The President presents this award to Doug Rinker, 1980 National FFA President.
7. Doug Rinker, 1980 National FFA President presents the President with a plaque in appreciation for his leadership in energy conservation.
8. The President departs the Rose Garden.

When you arrive, the two awards you are to present will be on a table to the left of the podium.

In case of rain, this event will take place as planned, in 450 OEOB.

POOL REPORT #5

LEAVING PRAIRIE DU CHIEN

SUNDAY, AUGUST 19, 1979

Powell assembled the pool in the bow of the Texas Deck around a white wrought iron table, and at 6:15 (local) the President joined us and chatted for about an hour. He talked about Andy Young, reports of another Middle East summit, lore of the Mississippi and new members of his Administration, fishing and his personal reading habits, among other things.

The President then was asked if he kept a diary, and he said "when I'm in Washington I do it every day. It's amazing how detailed mine is." He said he will immediately dictate accounts of important conversations and on other occasions will dictate summaries of the day's activities in the evenings or sometimes early the next morning.

He said this is the only thing he dictates. His other letters, directions to Cabinet officers, etc., are written out in long-hand. Most of his communications, of course, are drafted by others, and he makes handwritten changes if needed. On important telephone calls with other heads of government, secretaries on both ends listen in on the conversation and make notes for the official record, as distinct from his diary.

As an example of Carter's concern for a detailed record, he told of how, during the Camp David negotiations, he had made notes of his separate conversations with Begin and Sadat which were typed immediately and given to Brzezinski, Vance and "Fritz if he was there."

"Now I've got a book this thick," he said, holding up his fingers to indicate 2 to 3 inches. He said what he dictated for his diary was a more impressive version than the aides-memoires.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

July 28, 1980

Dear Jennings:

I read with interest and gratitude the comments you made on the floor of the Senate last week in support of the boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics. As you stated so appropriately, the boycott was supported overwhelmingly by both the Congress and the U.S. Olympic Committee, and we were joined by many other nations throughout the world.

I remain firmly convinced that the United States was right to refuse to participate in Olympic games hosted by a country that has invaded another sovereign state. Your unwavering support of our action is deeply gratifying.

Sincerely,

ator from West Virginia will speak, then the Senator from Colorado will speak, then I will be available to the Senator from Alaska for his inquiries, and then I will read the editorials.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that be the order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I appreciate the courtesy and cooperation of the able Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. TSONGAS) of the Senator from Alaska (Mr. STEVENS) and the understanding of the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART).

Not that this takes on any degree of importance over the subject matter that we have, but there was a release which has been given to the media earlier today, and I wanted this statement based upon something that I said at the time of the release to be live remarks on the floor of the Senate. I, with the understanding that you have made, will hope to speak very briefly to the subject matter which is not the Alaskan lands bill, which I will want to discuss with other Senators and work on certain amendments in which I am interested, during the debate, discussion, and then the final vote.

And I am grateful also to the chairman of the committee who is now on the floor for having said earlier he would give me this opportunity. I am appreciative of the Senator from Washington (Mr. JACKSON).

LORD KILLANIN IGNORES SOVIET INVASION IN HIS WARPED AND INTEMPERATE CONDEMNATION OF THE OLYMPIC BOYCOTT BY THE UNITED STATES

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, a United Press International dispatch from Moscow prior to the formal opening of the Olympic Games on Saturday contains some unseemly comments from the outgoing president of the International Committee on the Olympics.

Lord Killanin, in what UPI describes as a tone of "uncharacteristic bitterness," charged that if American football and baseball had been included in the Moscow Olympics, "we would not have had the boycott."

He accused President Carter and his aides of having "virtually no knowledge of any sport other than American football and baseball."

I say to my colleagues I feel that Lord Killanin is wide of the mark, very wide of the mark, in several instances. He wrongly interprets the Olympic boycott as the sole decision of President Carter and his aides. While our President certainly gave effective leadership to encourage other nations to boycott the Olympics in Moscow, it was the Congress of the United States, acting as representatives of the American people, that joined in this decisionmaking process through formal resolutions approved by both the Senate and the House of Representatives.

The ultimate decision was made by the U.S. Olympic Committee which voted overwhelmingly at its meeting in Denver, not to participate if the Games were held in Moscow.

The retiring IOC president appears to have as little understanding of the American political process as he accuses President Carter of having in regard to international sports.

As to his cynical observations on "football and baseball," it is sufficient to point to the records of the modern Olympic games and note that American athletes have always represented themselves well in all sports events.

But the most alarming fact about Lord Killanin's intemperate remarks is his total disregard of the reason for the boycott. He made absolutely no mention of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. It is well to talk about sportsmanship and fair play in the context of the games, but apparently Lord Killanin feels that Soviet armored attacks on helpless Afghanistan villages have no relationship to the Soviet Government hosting the Olympics.

There are 81 nations represented in Moscow, a participation higher than anticipated. Therefore, Lord Killanin deems the boycott "a failure."

On the contrary, the decision of most Western countries, with the notable exception of France, not to go to Moscow is an ennobling symbol of condemnation for the Soviet invasion. Our human rights policy would have been a failure, in my opinion, if no boycott had been evoked.

Mr. President, I shall ask to have printed in the RECORD the news article from the Martinsburg, W. Va., Journal of July 19, which I read while visiting beautiful Harpers Ferry National Historical Park on Saturday, July 19.

I ask unanimous consent that the article entitled "Boycotted Olympics Open; Carter Blasted," be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BOYCOTTED OLYMPICS OPEN; CARTER BLASTED

Moscow.—Lord Killanin, outgoing president of the International Olympic Committee, Friday attacked President Carter's leadership of the boycott of the Moscow Games, which open Saturday with a Soviet spectacular in Lenin Stadium.

As an athlete jogger into Moscow holding aloft the Olympic torch, Killanin unleashed a blistering attack in which he charged Carter and his aides of having "virtually no knowledge of any sport other than American football and baseball."

With uncharacteristic bitterness, Killanin said that if those sports "had been in the Olympic Games, we wouldn't have had the boycott."

The 65-year-old Irish peer, who said he was tired "after eight traumatic years" in office, made it clear in a news conference he believed the boycott had failed.

Prior to the boycott, 100 nations were expected to send teams to the Moscow Olympics, Killanin said.

"But when I saw President Leonid Brezhnev a few weeks ago, I thought it likely that only 50 would compete but the number here is 81. That's 31 more than I thought."

Killanin said the boycott failed because Carter and his aides "did not understand how sport is organized in the world."

He did not refer to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, which prompted the boycott, but IOC sources said he and other committee members expect a new Soviet offensive there once the Olympics are out of the way.

Noting that the term "boycott" originated in his own country when Irish tenants refused to pay taxes to their landlords, Killanin said, "It did not work then and it does not work now. I believe boycotts are counter-productive."

He said the U.S. government's request that its flag not be flown at the closing Olympic ceremony was still under discussion "but at the moment there is no change in the final ceremony."

Mr. RANDOLPH. I thank my colleague.

ALASKA NATIONAL INTEREST LANDS CONSERVATION ACT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 39).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, again I yield time as the manager of the bill, Senator JACKSON, I think, would yield time to his colleague.

Mr. HART. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield 15 minutes on the bill I shall appreciate it.

Mr. STEVENS. If there is any dispute the time can run against our time later. But I believe it will run against the time of Senator JACKSON.

Mr. HART. I thank the Senator. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. HART. Mr. President, the Senate has before it today a landmark piece of legislation. All sides agree to that. The Alaska lands bill has often been said to involve the "conservation votes of the century." This is not an overstatement. Never before has Congress had an opportunity to protect such vast tracts of unspoiled land as units of our different conservation systems: National parks and preserves, national wildlife refuges, wilderness areas, and wild and scenic rivers. In Alaska, for the first time, we have a chance to put into these conservation systems entire ecological units, before commercial activities destroy their natural character and limit our options.

But the issues involved in this bill are not just conservation issues. Alaska offers much more than just wilderness and wildlife. Alaska is rich in many economic resources, including huge reserves of oil and gas we need to develop to meet national needs. As we decide which lands to preserve for the future, we must also be far-sighted enough to allow the development of these resources.

Coloradans must regularly grapple with similar conflicts involving our own State's resources. Colorado has more magnificent mountains than are found in any State except Alaska. In our oil shale reserves, we also have abundant energy resources. As we in Colorado face the issues related to these and our other resources, it is a continuing challenge both to preserve what is special about our State and to develop the resources the entire Nation needs.

I have approached the Alaska lands bill in the same manner, following the same general principles I use with Colorado's resources. I have studied the resource values of the lands in question. I

Randolph's rebuttal is 'right on'

THREE CHEERS for Sen. Jennings Randolph.

The veteran lawmaker from West Virginia denounced Ireland's Lord Killanin in a speech on the Senate floor last Monday.

Someone should have, and Randolph obviously had the desire — and courage — to do so. (Politics wasn't a motive, either. He's not on the ballot this year.)

Killanin, retiring as president of the International Olympic Committee, had taken a verbal blast at President Carter and the United States last Friday in Moscow.

He charged that "we wouldn't have had an Olympic boycott" if American football and baseball had been included in the Olympic Games. He said Carter and his aides have virtually no knowledge of any sports except those two.

Randolph, in responding, said Killanin's "unseemly remarks" show a basic misunderstanding of the American political process.

"While our president certainly gave effective leadership and made the basic decisions on the boycott," he declared, "Congress, acting as representatives of the American people, joined in this decision-making process through formal resolutions approved by both the Senate and the House of Representatives."

Randolph also rapped Killanin's failure to mention the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in his criticism of the boycott.

"It is well to talk about sportsmanship and fair play in the context of the games," Randolph said, "but apparently Lord Killanin feels that Soviet armored attacks on helpless Afghanistan villages have no relationship with the Soviet Government hosting the Olympics."

Unfortunately, the senator's remarks weren't given nearly the prominence Killanin's blast received in the media. Perhaps that shouldn't have been surprising, though. Some national reporters seem interested only in the "sensational," regardless of merit.

Lord Killanin's statement about football and baseball was silly, of course. Absence of those sports from the program didn't keep the U.S. from participating in any of the previous Olympic Games. Why would it now?

The Olympic committee president also showed his bias, ignorance and irresponsibility by failing to mention the Afghanistan invasion — the real issue in the U.S.-led boycott.

If his native Ireland rather than Afghanistan had been the victim of such Soviet aggression, would Lord Killanin have reacted to a boycott of the Moscow Games the same way?

That's a question some writer or broadcaster covering the Olympics should have asked him. If anyone did, though, the answer apparently never reached the U.S.

SHORT SHOTS:

Not everyone will have to pay $5 per game to park at new Mountaineer Field this fall. Donors of $1,000 or more to the Mountaineer Scholarship Fund are entitled to one free space each.

West Virginia University's athletic department is sponsoring a pre-dinner party for those attending the State Sports Writers Association's annual summer meeting Sunday night at Wheeling. Dick Martin and Mike Parsons will be around to greet the scribes.

Whitey Gwynne, the retired WVU athletic trainer, spoke at a convention of Niagara equipment salesmen recently. He talked about using some of the firm's items when serving as a trainer for Olympics.

Bob Patton, former assistant football coach at WVU, now is in the real estate business in Nashville. Friends say he has had five heart bypasses, but appears to be getting along very well.

Penn State's is the first of the collegiate media football guides to reach this desk. It's bigger than most, numbering 192 pages plus the front and back covers.

Dear Mr. President
You will be with the U.S.
Olympic athletes
on Wednesday

You may want to see what your supporters
said on the boycott
