THE CARTER PRESIDENTIAL CENTER

After leaving the White House, former President Jimmy Carter felt an obligation to use the knowledge, influence and experience he had gained in office to continue the search for solutions to problems on his national and international agenda. These include the issues of education, hunger, health, environment, human rights, conflict resolution and arms control.

The counsel of knowledgeable and distinguished leaders both here and abroad led him to the development of the Carter Presidential Center. The Center, completed in 1986, houses the Jimmy Carter Library, the Carter Center of Emory University, Global 2000 and the Carter-Menil Human Rights Foundation, all of which promote the exploration of important world issues through consultations, research, and action.

JIMMY CARTER LIBRARY

More than 27 million documents as well as photographs, gifts and mementoes from the Carter Administration are housed in the Jimmy Carter Library and play a part in the ongoing activities of all components of the Carter Presidential Center.

Among the Library's documents are the original records of the Camp David Accords, the SALT II Treaty, the normalization of relations with China, the Panama Canal Treaty, the Iranian crisis, the evolution of a national energy policy, the deregulation of key U.S. industries and the preparation of the Global 2000 report.

Additionally, the Library offers information on the environment, human rights and conflict resolution to aid in understanding complex issues still critical today.

Departing from custom, a museum has been created to present the history of the United States from the unique perspective of the country's first 39 presidents.

THE CARTER CENTER OF EMORY UNIVERSITY

The Carter Center of Emory University unites President Carter's public policy agenda with that of Emory University, headed by Dr. James T. Laney, to offer a constructive, nonpartisan atmosphere for scholars, policy makers and experts from around the world.

Carefully integrated into the tradition of university education, fellows have been appointed to address issues of domestic and international policy through programs of intensive research, inquiry, public forums and consultations.

While emphases will change from time to time, continuing programs already underway address Middle East peace, health policy in the United States, arms control and international security, conflict resolution, the Latin American debt crisis, democracy in the American hemisphere and global health.

Former President Gerald Ford and other American and foreign leaders have been deeply involved in the Center's consultations.

GLOBAL 2000

Global 2000, Inc. was established to implement some of the international programs of the Carter Presidential Center.

Inspiration for the foundation came from the 1980 Global 2000 Report to the President of the United States which concluded that trends in population, resources and environment are linked to poverty, injustice and social conflicts.

Administered by President Carter with the assistance of the two co-founders, Japanese philanthropist Ryoichi Sasakawa and Bank of Credit and Commerce International President Agha Hasan Abedi, Global 2000 is premised on the belief that concerted action by both governments and private individuals can help alleviate human suffering.

Global 2000 field programs are presently assisting governments in Africa and Asia with the problems of hunger, health and the environment.

THE CARTER-MENIL HUMAN RIGHTS FOUNDATION

President Carter has long been deeply concerned with violations of human rights. To promote continued efforts on behalf of human rights, the Carter-Menil Human Rights Foundation was formed, combining President Carter's influence with the advocacy of Dominique de Menil of Houston, the foundation president and a prominent critic of human rights violations.

Each year, one or two individuals or organizations are recognized with a major award for courageous and effective work to further human rights. The prize is presented annually on December 10, International Human Rights Day. A distinguished panel of advisors representing the foremost human rights organizations assists in the selection of award recipients.

Additionally, the foundation and the Carter Center of Emory University help human rights groups publicize human rights abuses and intercede directly on behalf of victims.

ADMINISTRATION AND SUPPORT

Construction of the Carter Presidential Center has been made possible by more than $25 million in gifts, half of which have come from individuals, foundations, and corporations in Georgia. Capital gifts are still needed for building expansion, electronic equipment, books and research material.

The Jimmy Carter Library has been deeded to the United States government and is administered by the National Archives and Records Administration, as provided by federal law. Emory University manages the Carter Center of Emory University. The overall complex is maintained by the Carter Presidential Center.

As chairman of the board of the Carter Presidential Center, President Carter works closely with the National Archivist and the president of Emory University to insure coordination of the Presidential Center's activities.

THE CARTER PRESIDENTIAL FUND

The operations and programs of the Carter Presidential Center are dependent on the continuing generosity of donors. The Carter Presidential Fund invites gifts of all kinds. Special recognition is given for annual pledges at the following levels:

Founders	$25,000 or more
Sponsors	10,000
Friends	5,000
Supporters	1,000

A donor may designate a gift for a specific program or project. All contributions are tax deductible.
