Congress in 1968 enacted section 235 of the National Housing Act. This program, which was to bring home-ownership to lower income families (originally between $5000 and $7000 yearly), is another seamy episode in HUD's and the FHA's long tradition of mismanagement. The agencies have brought section 235 into disrepute and, in doing so, have thwarted Congress's will, robbed thousands of their opportunity for home-ownership, and left parts of Detroit, Chicago, and other major cities abandoned wastelands.

To illustrate section 235:

A family earning $6000 would require assistance to buy a $15000 home. This is because mortgage payments ($1200), real estate taxes and insurance ($500), and other expenses--heat, light, water, and repairs ($500) would come to $2200 yearly, more than 35 percent of the family's income, well above the 25 percent that families should devote to housing. The section 235 program attacked this cost by effectively reducing the mortgage interest, in some cases down to one percent yearly. For the $6000 family, section 235 would lower mortgage payments to $700 and reduce total housing expenses to $1700. While still costing slightly above the 25 percent ceiling, homeownership was now manageable. The program contemplated that as the family income rose, federal assistance would decline, in time disappearing altogether as the family became self-sufficient.

Between 1969 and 1973, the program aided more than 400,000 families to become (mostly first-time) homeowners but, as the enclosed New York Times articles reveal, the experience for many became a nightmare. "Suede shoe operators" bought old, substandard houses for a small sum, made "cosmetic repairs", obtained a friendly "windshield" appraisal for several times the true value, gained FHA mortgage insurance based on the inflated value, sought out inexperienced customers who would overpay for the dwelling, and even falsified a customer's employment and financial data. Many FHA personnel simply acted negligently; some were corrupt. The ultimate victims were the homebuyers who found themselves unable to make major repairs or carry their mortgage payments. Default, foreclosure (sometimes with illegal haste), and abandonment ensued. Today, nationwide, HUD owns more than 65,000 boarded-up single-family structures. 14,000 (!) HUD-owned dwellings (or the vacant lot where the dwelling once stood) are in Detroit alone.

Home-ownership for all working people who wish it should be encouraged.* A properly run program would spur new construction, help bring stability to older neighborhoods, and encourage savings. It may also help break down the barriers to greater social and economic integration of our communities. But the program--to work--requires a responsible and dedicated bureaucracy that believes in people and is prepared to serve them.

* A legislative footnote. One year before Congress enacted section 235, all Senate Republicans joined to co-sponsor Senator Percy's bill to bring homeownership to lower-income families.

As HUD has run the program, the banks lost nothing and speculators made a killing. The only losers were the people section 235 was meant to help.
