Fran has scheduled the NAB meeting for October 19.

I've talked with Bill Spring and he's agreed that all other info in the memo can be folded into the briefing paper for the NAB meeting.

In future, please send schedule requests directly to Phil/Fran - not to the President.

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT

FROM: STU EIZENSTAT Stu.
BILL SPRING Bill S.

SUBJECT: BUSINESS AND EMPLOYMENT POLICY

This memorandum raises the following issues relating to business involvement with our employment and training policies:

- The selection of the new NAB chairman;
- Your role in the NAB annual meeting, October 19
- A meeting with private sector leaders on the issue of youth employment to follow-up on your Camp David commitment.

The NAB Chairmanship

Ray Marshall, Jack Watson, Anne Wexler and I unanimously and enthusiastically recommend that you name John Filer, chief executive officer of the Aetna Life Insurance Company, to be the new chairman of the National Alliance of Business, succeeding Ruben Mettler of TRW.

Filer is a distinguished business leader. He was chairman of the commission on philanthropy that produced the useful "Filer Report," was recruited for the position by Business Roundtable leadership and, in conversation with us, has proved eager to move the NAB forward in partnership with government. He is also an old friend of Anne's.

The NAB Annual Membership Meeting

The NAB is playing a key role in launching the new partnership between the public and private sectors in employment policy. The annual membership meeting draws about 150 regional business leaders and the NAB board to Washington to meet the new chairman and to set the year's agenda. The Board includes Sol Linowitz, Coretta Scott King, Ben Hooks and Vernon Jordan.

This year's meeting is scheduled for Friday, October 19.

When Ruben Mettler of TRW took over as chairman from William Miller two years ago, you had a brief meeting in the Oval Office. Last year, at the annual membership meeting, both you and the Vice President spoke to the membership in Room 450 and a reception was held in the State Dining Room.

In conjunction with the meeting on the 19th, I recommend that you schedule a brief Oval Office meeting with Secretary Marshall, Dr. Mettler and Mr. Filer. It would give you an opportunity to lay out your priorities for the coming year.

If your schedule permits, I would also recommend again holding a State Dining Room reception. The event need take no more than 15 minutes of your time and would emphasize your commitment to employment at a time of rising unemployment.

A Follow-up to Camp David

After the meeting with business, civil rights and government leaders on employment policy at Camp David, Jody Powell announced your intention to have a meeting this fall to discuss with the private sector its role in combating youth unemployment, particularly during a recession. David Mahoney, of Norton-Simon, has committed his company to expand its workforce by 1% to provide job opportunities for disadvantaged youth. He briefly explained his program at Camp David. There are a number of other promising ideas that involve the use of our targeted jobs tax credit and business working with local school systems. We suggest that at your meeting with Filer, you ask him to take the lead, as his first assignment as NAB director, in planning a November meeting with business leadership, including small as well as large businesses, at which a private sector action plan could be discussed.

We should also use this occasion to solicit their advice on recommendations now being considered for a substantial youth employment initiative by the Vice President's Task Force on Youth Employment.

Decisions

If you concur with these recommendations, we will work with scheduling and the social office to arrange.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: HAMILTON JORDAN
ANNE WEXLER
STU EIZENSTAT
SARAH WEDDINGTON

SUBJECT: Eleanor Roosevelt Commemoration

The Roosevelt Room is full of momentos of Theodore and Franklin Roosevelt, but conspicuously lacks any object honoring Eleanor Roosevelt.

We think that you should remedy this omission, for these reasons:

- ¶ Mrs. Roosevelt made significant contributions to our national life, both in her 12 years as First Lady and in the 17 years between her husband's death and her own.

- ¶ She was the principal author of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

- ¶ She is revered by almost all Americans, and a move honoring her would be widely appreciated, especially by women, liberal Democrats, blacks, and human rights advocates.

We would suggest something modest. Specifically:

- ¶ At our suggestion, Clem Conger (who agrees with these proposals) has already obtained an appropriate portrait photograph of Mrs. Roosevelt from the Hyde Park archive.

- ¶ The portrait photo would be mounted in the same frame with the original drawing of a famous, heart-warming cartoon that appeared in the June 3, 1933, issue of The New Yorker. The artist, Robert Day, is in retirement in Arkansas, and although the Smithsonian has often tried to pry the original loose from him, he would rather donate it to the White House. (See attached. This celebrated cartoon well depicts Mrs. Roosevelt's devotion to the welfare of the people.)

¶ You would preside at a brief ceremony in the Roosevelt Room where the surviving Roosevelt children and other appropriate guests would be present, and the momentos would be put in place on one of the side tables.

The best date for this ceremony would be Thursday, October 11, 1979, the 95th anniversay of Mrs. Roosevelt's birth.

_____ Approve both momentos and ceremony.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALONZO McDONALD

From: Rick Hertzberg Rick

Subject: Proposed Eleanor Roosevelt event

The attached is an updated version of a memo I prepared for Jerry Rafshoon about a year ago. He never did anything with it and it has just been returned to me as part of the closing out of his office.

I still think this would be a very good low-key event -- good politically and good on the merits.

However, as you can see, the best possible date for it -- October 11 -- is now coming up fast. Therefore it would have to be rushed through kind of quickly so that the relevant offices could make the arrangements. I would make the arrangements on getting the original of the drawing myself.

Sarah, Stu and Anne are all on board. If you agree that this would be a good event, I request you to have this memo sent in to the President, either directly or through Phil.

Hamilton —

Here is a good idea — & associate the President more with FDR, etc —

With your initials it should go in on Monday —

Cly

STAMP OUT SCHISTOSOMIASIS!

NOW that we have got everything else in the world fixed up and running nicely, it is high time that we pitched in and helped the Rockefeller Foundation stamp out schistosomiasis in Egypt. I feel like an awful piker for having let it go as long as this.

Schistosomiasis, or flatworm disease, has been going on since 2000 B.C. among the Egyptians, so we really aren't the only ones who have been letting it slide, you see. Four thousand years of schistosomiasis almost makes it look as if the Egyptians just didn't care, one way or the other. Perhaps the Rockefeller Foundation is being quixotic about the thing and butting in where it isn't wanted.

Dr. Barlow, who is leading the fight against flatworm disease (or "Benton's bleenie"), says that it is caused by snails, which would, on the surface, seem to be pretty fairly easy animals to keep away from. I mean, you wouldn't have to put up nets around your bed or keep slapping, the way you have to do to ward off mosquitoes. If the snails in this district were carriers for any disease, I don't suppose that more than one or two people in the entire state would catch it. But the Egyptians seem to be pushovers for snails. It has been estimated that eighty-five per cent of the native population has schistosomiasis, which shows you how snails get around in Egypt.

It really isn't the snails who give the disease to all those Egyptians, but a parasite worm which rides around on the snail, which makes it all the more complicated. (They can't be the same as our snails. They must be a lot more agile.) These flatworms, according to Dr. Barlow, who ought to know, lay their eggs, which are known as "miracidia," and they swim around until they find another snail (I may not be getting this right. It sounds a little repetitious to me.) If they don't find a snail within twelve hours, they die. This ought to make their extermination easy, as all one should have to do would be to hide all the snails for twelve hours.

When the miracidia have entered the snail (I have got it wrong), they go through some sort of rigmarole and come out as microscopic creatures resembling a fork-tailed tadpole. (So far the Egyptians have not figured in the thing at all, as far as I can see.) These tadpoles swim around again until they find what is known as a "host." This is where the Egyptians come in. They are the most perfect hosts in the world.

But here again the time limit enters, and should make it even easier to keep the miracidia out of the Egyptians. If miracidia do not find a human host within twenty-four hours, they die. You would think that this alone would limit their menace to almost a minimum, provided their human hosts can run at all. Not even the strictest rules of hospitality make it incumbent on a host to stand still and let himself be eaten into by a miracidium.

The catch seems to be that the Egyptians are great hands to wade around in water, irrigation ditches, and such, and the worm is at liberty to come and go through any breaks in the skin around the ankles and feet. Once they are in, cirrhosis of the liver is just around the corner. So much for the technical side of the fight against schistosomiasis.

I SUPPOSE that it has occurred to Dr. Barlow and his aides, if not to the Egyptians over a period of four thousand years, to wear rubber boots when they go wading. I wouldn't be so bold as to suggest this. I also suppose that there has been some attempt to do away with snails, but as the Egyptian snails seem to be a lot more capable than ours, it probably is not so easy to do. From all that I can gather about them, they would have to be shot at with rifles, on the wing.

So I really have no solution for the problem, in spite of my sincere desire to help the Rockefeller Foundation. But, as I said before, the Egyptians have got to do *some*thing for themselves. They can't go around being the same perfect hosts that they have been for centuries, and if they give a darn whether they have cirrhosis of the liver or not, they have got to take a little interest in the campaign and do their bit. With any coöperation at all on the part of the victims of schistosomiasis themselves, we ought to crash through with a victory before another four thousand years are up.

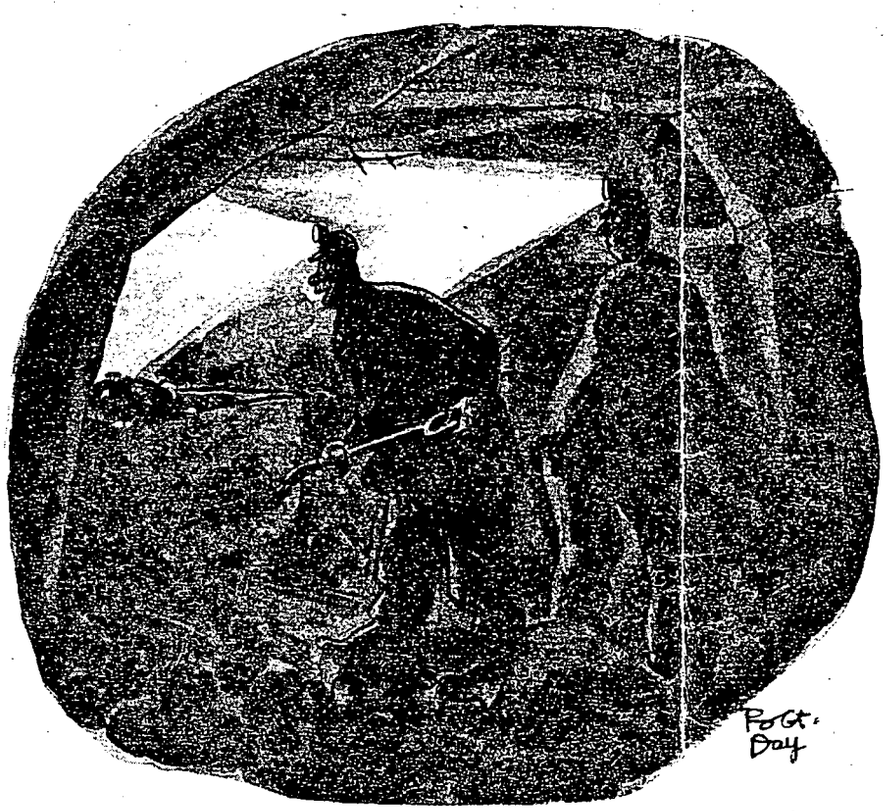

The big surprise about the whole thing to me is to find out that there are any Egyptians today.

—ROBERT BENCHLEY
