MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT

FROM: ZBIGNIEW BRZEZINSKI

SUBJECT: Proposed Presidential Memorandum on Improved U.S. Implementation of the CSCE Final Act

As a means of demonstrating our own efforts to meet our CSCE commitments, the State Department (Tab B) recommends that you approve a Presidential Memorandum (Tab A), asking agencies of the Executive Branch to "keep (Helsinki Final Act) commitments in mind as (they) develop programs." The agencies are also to work with State and the CSCE Commission as they act "to assess implementation and to identify areas where American performance can be improved." Each agency should designate someone to work with State and the Commission, including help with preparing reports by each of them. The Presidential Memorandum notes that our record on implementation is already excellent.

This has little practical force; but it is a demonstration of our CSCE commitment that would underscore - especially to the Soviet Union and the East European states -- our own efforts.

Jim Fallows has cleared the text of your memorandum.

RECOMMENDATION:

That you approve the Presidential Memorandum at Tab A.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: JODY POWELL
JERRY RAFSHOON

SUBJECT: Speech on Waste and Fraud

We understand why you feel uncomfortable with the outline of the waste and fraud speech. The proposed initiatives are mostly small items -- not of great dollar consequence in themselves.

Nevertheless, we still feel that it is imperative that you give this speech, even if it contains no new program announcements. What is far more important is to demonstrate leadership on this issue -- to send the message to the public, the press, and the bureaucracy that you have a personal interest in it. Our skimishes against waste and fraud (in GSA, HEW, and Labor) must become all-out war.

Inside the bureaucracy, the temptation to refrain from rocking the boat is very strong. That is why Cabinet officers, and those who serve under them, need Presidential encouragement to come forward with findings of waste and fraud. They need to know that you will welcome such revelations as the first step toward the elimination of abuses.

If you prefer, the speech can focus on the two most substantive items -- the ways in which the Inspector General bill and Civil Service reform will work -- and on putting anti-waste and anti-fraud into the context of your long-established, long-term commitment to making the government work better.

I don't believe that the public is mad about taxes as such or about government as such. The public is mad about their hard-earned money being wasted and stolen. And they should be. At least one person in government should be the champion of those people.

Dear Mrs. Carter:

As you are aware, COSSMHO recently held its National Hispanic Conference on Families in Houston, October 12-15, 1978. The tremendous success of our Conference was due in part to Chip's warm, sincere, and candid presentation during our Noche de Reconocimiento. He played a vital role not only by presenting the youth awards, but also by conveying a very down-to-earth, warm feeling toward the concept of La Familia.

Too often mothers are not praised for their children's accomplishments and how they are perceived. I hesitated to write this letter as I was not sure it was the proper thing to do since Chip is an adult. But after talking to Kathy, a member of your staff, I feel much more at ease communicating to you what I believe every mother welcomes--that their children are loved and appreciated, and that they represent the family always in the finest tradition. That is how I feel about Chip.

Warmest regards.

Sincerely,

Rodolfo Balli Sanchez

THE PRESIDENT
THE WHITE HOUSE

FROM AMBASSADOR ALSTON

Mr. President:

You have read James Reston "U.S. Defense: 'The Present Danger'" and Hugh Sidey "Will Carter Take a Spot at the Head of the Parade?" There is no actual relation between the two columns. But it seems to me there is nevertheless a real connection between them.

I would suggest, with respect to Reston's idea, that you invite Sam Nunn, or a senator with views similar to Sam's, to take a "devil's advocate" position and initiate a debate in the United States Senate on the subject "What is the Present Danger". The American people will applaud being made aware of the facts. I would predict that at the conclusion of a well ordered exposure of the facts, they would opt for spending less on defense. The availability of the ultimate weapon to both the U.S. and the Soviets provides protection for both sides. If knowledge that this is so is not a deterrent to nuclear war, God help us all.

Scotty Reston expresses my view when he says: "... the 'present danger' lies in this country not so much from the threat of Soviet agression but from the threat of inflation and the erosion of confidence in the U.S. dollar and the control of the U.S. economy."

In my thinking -- which is that we should address the problem of inflation and work toward continuing to improve the quality of life for disadvantaged Americans and that these objectives should be accomplished at the expense of the defense budget -- I am moved to speak with you not only because of a firm conviction that such a course is "right", but because of an equally firm conviction that the course is politically sound.

My position is based on the premise that the American people will insist on your unqualified assurance that the country has the ability to respond effectively should the Soviets commence hostilities and that this condition will always maintain. I believe that you are able to truthfully give them that assurance.

I don't know what Hugh Sidey had in mind specifically but I see an opportunity for you to accept his invitation to lead the parade.

ALSTON
